The "Amateur Nite."

There should be no lack of local talent in the near future, if the youngsters who took part in the "Amateur Nite", presented by the Didsbury School Orchestra last Wednesday evening, is any criterion. The artistes who entered were practically all juniors, and the youngsters gave some very creditable performances.

The program was divided into six classes and prizes were awarded in each class. Prizes were awarded for the entertainment value of the selection, and the judges had a difficult job in choosing the different winners. The chairman of the judging committee declared that in practically no case was the decision unanimous.

The Bannister microphone and loud-speaker equipment was used and added much to the effectiveness of the performances. Mr. J. A. McGhee made a very competent announcer.

Following were the winners in the various classes:

Junior Solo: 1st Dorothy Buhr, 2nd Frances Jackson.

Junior Instrumental: 1st Nora Barrett, piano; Mary Boorman, violin.

Junior Elocution: 1st Emil Dupont, 2nd Clary Youngs, both of Melvin.

Intermediate Solo: 1st Gladys Geeson, 2nd Jack Edwards, 3rd Florence Chamberlin.

Dancing: 1st Marie Lumsden, 2nd Donna Durrant.

Piano: 1st Dorothy Ranton and Doris Friesen, 2nd Gladys and Eileen Geeson. The winning numbers in this class were awarding materials hat against the solo which suggest new 1st Betty Boorman, cello, 2nd Delmar Foote French horn.

A special prize was awarded the pupils of Neapolis School who put on a very clever tumbling act.

"In science, in literature, in art, we accept the great masters and rejoice in that insight by which they enable us to see and understand. What is more reasonable than we should learn of Him who is master of living? We know that there is nothing cheap and vulgar, nothing selfish and wrong about Jesus Christ. There is the test for the perplexed conscience! Carry your problem into the presence of Him, who is the Way and the Truth and the Life and judge it there. The truth will be plain and the way will be clear. In His light we shall see."

Urge Government Combine Offices of Fish Warden and Game Guardian

Urging the government to combine the office of fish warden and game guardian, a resolution was passed at a meeting of the Didsbury Fish and Game Association held on Sunday afternoon, asking that a full-time fish and game guardian be appointed to take care of the fish and game preserves west of Didsbury. The meeting was also of the opinion that assistant guardians should be appointed during the season. It was reported that there was considerable poaching in the territory and this move was necessary for the preservation of the wild life of the district.

It was decided to make a raid on magpies and crows this spring, and a committee under the chairmanship of Ken McCoy was appointed to build traps, it being reported that this method had been very successful last year. The other members of the committee were Ed. Ford, J. Fleury and W. Gillrie.

Items of Interest

Alberta's school population for the term ended June 30th last, totalled 167,193, a decrease of 761 compared with the previous year, according to the annual report of the provincial department of education tabled in the legislature Friday afternoon by Premier Aberhart. Percentage of enrolment in the elementary grades was given as 82.45 per cent and in the secondary grades 17.54 per cent.

Massey Berry, outstanding northland flier of Edmonton, has been awarded the Trans-Canada trophy for his service to aviation in 1936. One of the most prized aviation awards in the Dominion, the trophy is presented annually to the Canadian pilot who makes the greatest contribution to advancing the cause of aviation. It was donated by the late Daizen McKee. Berry is the fifth Edmonton pilot to receive the award.

Whether or not Premier Aberhart will represent Alberta at the coronation ceremonies will probably develop into a major political question within the next couple of weeks. There is a growing feeling both inside and outside the legislative assembly that a sum of money should not be appropriated for this purpose, in view of the financial condition of the province.

The Constitutional Problem

Whatever politicians on any party front may think or say on the subject, the people of the country and certainly those of Western Canada must have come to the conclusion by this time that some changes in the constitution are necessary in the light of recent decisions of the Privy Council on questions referred to them as to the validity of Canadian social and marketing legislation.

While on the surface the respective rights of the Federal parliament or provincial legislatures to enact legislation of this character involved in these rulings of the court of last resort, the question goes deeper than that, now that Canada has emerged from swaddling clothes and has assumed the status of nationhood.

Taking it for granted that the people of this country should have the legal right to implement in legislation any plans or policies the majority may desire to impose, there is one school of thought which contends that this end should be achieved by securing amendments to the British North America Act from the British Parliament, while another group is of the opinion that the Act should be abrogated, leaving the way open to the major government of this country to draft and enact its own constitution.

The greater part of a century has rolled around since the passage of the British North America Act, allocating responsibilities and legislative jurisdiction as between the Dominion parliament and the provincial assemblies at the time of Confederation. Since that time there have not only been great changes in the condition of the country, but also in the legislative needs and aspirations of the governed as well as in the status of the Dominion in its relationship to the Mother country and the Empire.

Among these changes in needs and desires is a marked trend in the direction of increasing governmental administration of social services, whether by the Dominion or the provinces. It is true there are those who dislike this trend but, nevertheless, if a majority of the people demand governmental administration or control of such services, a constitution written seventy years ago when circumstances were very different, should not be allowed to block the pathway.

That the necessity for revision of authority in some form exists and that the British Parliament is not likely to stand in the way of the desires of the Canadian people for greater elasticity in shaping their own course, is evident from the comment of the London Times immediately after the Privy Council decisions were published, when this authoritative organ of British public opinion said:

"Now that it is definitely established how narrow are the limits restricting the authority of the Dominion Parliament, it is for the statesmen and people of Canada to determine what extensions are necessary. All parties are agreed there must be some redistribution of powers between the Dominion and the provinces, but difficulties arise as soon as any attempt is made to work out a new division or even settle the method of amendment."

The Times also points out that "as the constitution now stands the Dominion Parliament has no authority to legislate on industrial or social questions or regulate marketing in any general way; which means that until the constitution is amended the national government and Parliament of Canada are precluded from dealing with matters of increasingly great and urgent national importance."

As the situation now stands it appears not only desirable but imperative that no time be lost in dealing with this highly important question, and it should be dealt with in such a manner that in future when the country has made up its mind that legislation of any type is needful and desirable there will be no legal barriers to render it impotent, provided it is properly drawn.

The matter is of too great import to the future welfare of the country to be made the subject of political capitalization and it is imperative that the subject be approached by all political parties in a non-partisan way with a single eye to the country's needs.

The desired result could undoubtedly be best achieved by a conference of Dominion and provincial authorities devoted solely to the constitutional question. Such conference should be as representative as it is possible to make it. Principles which can be accorded support as nearly as possible to unanimity by all sections of the Dominion should be laid down and agreed upon and methods to be adopted to implement those decisions should be the subject of mutual agreement.

If a satisfactory program of this nature be carried to its ultimate conclusion and the problem approached in the right spirit, existing difficulties should be solved without dissension from within or objection from without the Dominion.

Famous Old Residence

Bransholm Castle Again Home Of Ducal Family Of Buccleuch

After an interval of 180 years the ducal family of Buccleuch has taken up residence once more at Bransholm Castle, near Hawick, says the News of the World. The Dowager Duchess, mother of the Duchess of Gloucester, is the new occupier, and will have the companionship of her two unmarried sons. Bransholm, or its site, is hoary with age. It was from there that William of Deloraine started on the ride immortalized in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." In its fortress days it was burned by an Earl of Northumberland, and blown up by an Earl of Surrey. Few houses have a more valuable art collection.

Heads Enlarge

Investigator Finds Cranium Increases In Size After Adult Age

Folks who have smarted under the stinging accusation of getting big-headed had vindication from the Smithsonian Institution.

Conducting tests on persons of at least three generations of United States ancestry, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, announced he found the length and breadth of the head increases in men and women up to about the middle decades of life.

"Just why and how," he said, "this should continue after adult life is reached will be a point for future determination."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks lousy.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Taking Rest Cure

Flying Career Too Strenuous For Mrs. Amy Mollison

In a clinic on the mountainside above Geneva, Mrs. Amy Mollison, who is 33, is seeking to win back the health she enjoyed until the strain of her flying career made itself felt. The clinic is close to glorious snow-fields where people of every nationality are now disporting themselves. But, although Mrs. Mollison enjoys snow sports, it is likely that some time must elapse before she is able to join in them. When wished a Happy New Year on the telephone, she said: "I am feeling tired. All I want now is to rest, and to get back my strength. My cure will take at least a month," she added. "But then I hope that I shall be quite fit again."

To Last Thousand Years

Manuscript Of Codex Sinaiticus Has Been Repaired And Bound

At the British Museum they have bound the Codex Sinaiticus to last another thousand years. Mr. Cockrell, who undertook the task, has had many difficulties. The vellum leaves made of sheepskin were much torn at the edges. The manuscript was in detached bundles of leaves, with some single ones. The leaves have been mended, the vellum softened, stretched and flattened and the Codex Sinaiticus will now go down the centuries, in two volumes, bound in white goatskin leather, between boards of English oak.

But Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription made me feel better in every way. It relieved me of the headaches, improved my appetite and helped to overcome the other symptoms."

BIRD SANCTUARIES

Jack Miner and his two sons, Manly (left), Jasper (centre), about to liberate a pair of Canada Geese to study their route of migration for scientific purposes.

Most people look upon Jack Miner's tagging system of ducks and geese as a hobby, when the fact of matter is it can't be estimated the value in dollars and cents by the various provinces of Canada and American States, because it gives the authorities knowledge of where the birds are each season of the year, and which state and province kills the most and where they are killed in any huge number.

For illustration, North Carolina at one time was killing more than any ten states. Jack Miner gives this information to the proper authorities with the result that several sanctuaries were established in that locality which gives the birds a place to breathe between shots. Had it not been for Jack Miner's tagging system the authorities would not have realized what a great percentage was being killed in such localities.

The sanctuary birds will come while making a catch a goose was caught wearing two tags—one on each leg. One had been put on in the fall of 1924, while the tag on the other was placed on in fall of 1928. Several are often re-caught which have been tagged back as far as the fall of 1928, but seldom is one caught that has been tagged back as far as 1924, chiefly because Jack Miner wasn't tagging many back that far. Last winter one was killed in North Carolina that had been tagged in 1918, making 14 years it had worn the tag; or in other words 28 trips across the continent. Jack Miner asks how many trips would it have made back and forth across the continent had it not had a sanctuary to give it safety from the hunters' shot and shell.

Furthermore, the tagging system proves that they go from one place of safety to another. Jack Miner has received several photos from owners of bird sanctuaries in North Carolina, other states as well as other sanctuaries in Ontario, which had been taken from blinds and which shows the geese wearing his tag. Thus while there are chains of sanctuaries throughout America, birds can't become exterminated yet and the hunters have good shooting between these sanctuaries. In other words the sanctuaries stop any exterminating possibility.

Millions of dollars have rightly been spent in the United States and Canada for museums where only stuffed specimens can be seen. Jack Miner asks, is it not just as sane if not more so, to maintain sanctuaries where specimens can be seen alive and saved from extermination.

Jack Miner with a pair of Canada honkers which he has caught and tagged and is about to liberate them to see where they are killed, who kills them and to gain other scientific knowledge of their habits and migration routes.

SELECTED RECIPES

CHERRY ROLL

Temperature: 375 degrees F.
Time: 25 minutes.
1 can cherries; 1 cup boiling water; 1/2 cup sugar; 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon; 2 cups Royal Household flour; 4 1/2 teaspoons baking powder; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1/4 cup shortening; 1 cup milk; 1 tablespoon butter.
Drain the cherries and to the juice add the boiling water, sugar and cinnamon. Boil gently for five minutes. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt; cut in the shortening with a dough blender. Make a well in the centre of the mixture, and into this pour the milk. Stir gently and turn the dough on a floured board. Knead for twenty counts; then roll into oblong shape. Sprinkle the dough with the cherries and roll up as a jelly roll. Place in greased casserole and pour the syrup over the roll. Cover and bake in a moderate oven for 15 minutes. Remove lid, spread with the softened butter and bake about 10 minutes until brown.

1 1/2 cups chopped cooked prunes
1/2 cup "Crown Brand" Corn Syrup
3 tablespoons Benson's Corn Starch
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 cup cold prune juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Method: Heat the prunes and "Crown Brand" Corn Syrup in top of double boiler. Mix Benson's Corn Starch and cinnamon to a paste with the cold prune juice; stir into the hot prunes. Stir and cook until the mixture thickens; cover and continue cooking for 15 minutes. Remove from heat; add lemon juice. Stir thoroughly. Pour into chilled moistened moulds. Serve with whipped cream.

The Right Pronunciation

People In U.S. Flooded Areas Peeved Over Mistakes

We live to learn. A radio announcer, broadcasting from the reinforced revetment wall at Cairo, Illinois, paused in his descriptive story to tell the rest of the world that the people of Cairo were peeved over outside pronunciation of their home town as "Ky-ro." It seems that the local pronunciation is "Kay-ro," and not "Ky-ro," as its namesake in Egypt is pronounced. Another radio announcement gave the local pronunciation of New Madrid, Missouri, as New "Madrid," with a falling accent on the "rid."

Japan had 23 fewer banks in 1936 than in 1935.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from any druggist, a package of Hemoroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemoroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Valuable Work Effected By Royal Canadian Air Force In Securing Aerial Photographs

Since 1922 and arrival of the air photograph, 481,000 square miles of Canada have been mapped, mostly in difficult and unsettled regions. Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, president of the National Research Council, told the Canadian Institute of Surveying.

Speaking at a luncheon in connection with the 30th annual convention, Gen. McNaughton said through utilization of information obtained from air photographs an important new road to a mining area in Manitoba was shortened by 31 miles. The saving, at from $5,000 to $7,000 a mile, alone exceeded the total cost of all photographic flying in Canada for a year.

Major-General McNaughton paid tribute to Royal Canadian Air Force flyers who had added considerably to the Dominion's collection of 700,000 air photographs covering nearly as many square miles.

"It was recognized," he said, "from the earliest days of the formation of the department of national defence that the pilots of the air force would need extensive training and practice in air photography, as this is one of their important duties in war, and it was the preoccupation of all concerned to see that this work served also as a useful economic purpose."

"As a result the vast proportion of the photographs, which have been made available for mapping and other uses, have practically cost us nothing, for the flying would have to be carried out in any event," he added.

Lieut.-Col. E. L. M. Burns, president of the institute, said adequate mapping throughout the Dominion was essential to successful operation of the trans-Canada airway. He said enormous amounts of money had been wasted through lack of adequate maps in planning main transportation systems.

He advocated extension of topographical surveys to aid in mining development and said the Canadian tourist industry would be greatly developed through proper maps.

A paper dealing with aerial surveys and air transportation was given by F. T. Jenkins of Winnipeg. In discussing commercial aerial surveys, he said this industry would be greatly stimulated if the government would contract for a considerable portion of its surveys.

The National Research Council had constructed two specially designed plotting machines in an effort to improve Canadian methods of making maps from air photographs. R. H. Field, of the council, said in another paper, "Excellent progress" had been made in Canada in this line of work, he said.

Popular Books

List Of Books That Have Been Read By Millions

A list has been prepared of books that in the past 60 years have sold to the extent of a million copies or more. "In His Steps" by Charles M. Sheldon, published in 1899, leads all the rest. It has been bought by 8,000,000 people. Next on the list is "Freckles", by Gene Stratton Porter, with a sale of 2,000,000, followed by "Girl of the Limberlost", 1,600,000 and "Laddie", by the same author, 1,500,000; "The Winning of Barbara Worth", Harold Bell Wright, 1,500,000; "Tom Sawyer", 1,500,000. Others include "Black Beauty", "Ben Hur", "The Outline of History", "Pollyanna", "The Call of the Wild", "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come", "Treasure Island", "Huckleberry Finn", "David Harum", "The Virginian", and "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew." There are more than 20 of them, of which perhaps three would be rated first class by the normal literary critic.

Modern books to go over the million mark are "Anthony Adverse" and "Gone With the Wind".

Revolution In Building

Exhibits Indicate Canadians Will Soon Be Using Glass Blocks

Come the architectural revolution in Canada, people who live in glass houses will not have to undress in the dark. Also, they will be able to throw stones just like anyone else.

An impression of architectural trends gleaned from photographic exhibits of outstanding works throughout the Dominion during the last two years indicates glass blocks will be used more and more in Canadian homes and business structures.

The glass blocks admit a lovely light but can't be seen through. They provide an insulation that keeps a home warmer in winter, cooler in summer. They are practically unbreakable.

When the sixth biennial exhibit of architecture and allied arts, sponsored by the Toronto chapter of the Ontario Association of Architects, opened in Toronto recently, Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General, delivered the opening address.

Photographs of architectural work in Canada since the last exhibition two years ago presented a panorama of the Dominion's awakening to modern influences, according to John M. Lyle, chairman of the hanging committee.

The revolution has taken seed in Canada, Mr. Lyle said. Younger people particularly are interested in flat roofed homes which allow for sun-bathing, complete simplicity of form, elimination of meaningless ornament, use of clearer, brighter colors in decoration of rooms, larger window areas, terraces, air conditioning and indirect lighting.

Also many new fabrics and building materials have been introduced which suggest new designs and forms.

Camouflage Just A Trick

Does Not Always Work Perfectly Even With People

Camouflage is the trick of making a thing look like something else. A battleship is painted to look like the waves. A building is covered with branches to make it look like a clump of trees. Other instances will occur to you.

But camouflage doesn't always work. The battleship can easily be located by a tiny machine that picks up its vibrations, and tells exactly where it is and how fast it is going; or an aeroplane can see both ship and the shadow cast by it.

There are many people who camouflage their words and actions and motives. If they fool anybody it is not for long. There is always something that betrays them for what they really are. The honest person never tries to camouflage. He does not pretend to be something that he is not.

Don't camouflage. The trick is easily spotted, and it is always a sign that there is something wrong somewhere. Be yourself. Be the best yourself that you possibly can, and you'll never need camouflage.

Horses Of All Ages

Saskatchewan Has More Than Ontario And Quebec Combined

Reports that the horse is "coming back" are confirmed by the current bulletin of agricultural statistics from Ottawa. While the estimated total on farms of Canada in 1936, namely 2,918,540, shows a decrease of 12,797 from that of 1935, the number of colts and fillies is up 35,190 from that of the previous year. More young horses are being raised in every province of the Dominion except New Brunswick, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The last-named province, by the way, has more horses of all ages than Ontario and Quebec combined. But its 1936 total, at 505,600, is down 28,200, which is more than twice the total decrease for the whole country. Alberta, though its total also showed a slight decrease, had 18,600 more colts than in 1935.

May Carry A Moral

Careless Drivers Pay When Self-Appointed Rescuer Is Near

A story in the New York Times seems to carry a moral of some kind for thoughtless drivers.

As the traffic light turned on a busy corner, a frail old woman started to cross the street with a crowd. A big car brusquely nosed its way around the corner. While others scattered out of the way, the old woman stood still, seemingly incapable of movement.

Just as the car seemed about to hit her, a silk-hatted man, with a cane, limped quickly to her side and swung her out of harm's way. At the same moment there was a sharp report, and the tire of the car went flat.

Talking to a nearby policeman, a few minutes later, a reporter learned that a similar incident had been happening nearly every morning, and that the silk-hatted man figured in each of them.

Following up the story, the reporter learned that the man was a former diplomat, whose foot had been crushed by an automobile; and that it was not a cane he carried, but a sword stick.

The forgotten pedestrian, who has to keep out of the way of imperious drivers, should be glad to know he has an avenger.—Guelph Mercury.

Match Industry In Japan

Started In Small Way From Technique Learned In France

The Japanese match industry was started in a small way many years ago; the technique of the industry was learned in France. After a few years Japan was practically self-sufficient and had begun exporting in a small way. No conspicuous success was achieved, however, until the World War. The year 1919 witnessed the peak development with an output totalling some 518,738,000 dozen matches valued at 33,652,000 yen. Competition from the European producers of matches, principally Sweden, in the following year, combined with the establishment of higher duties in some export markets, mainly India, resulted in output falling to 20,711,000 dozen safety matches valued at 8,063,000 yen in 1933. The industry is based to a great extent on highly efficient handicraft with wages paid largely on a piece-work basis and with a ratio of one male to three female operatives.

Not Much To Ask

An Ohio state university professor at Trenton, N.J., said that chickens need meals in bed, and air conditioning and diffused lighting in their houses. Such treatment, according to the St. Thomas Times-Journal, should result in eggs being laid, fried, boiled, scrambled or poached, as desired.

Although nearly 20,000,000 of them enter the earth's atmosphere every 24 hours there is no authenticated record of any person having been killed by a meteorite anywhere.

Seeds Gave Him Idea

Inventor Of Autogyro Told How Plan Originated

It is grim irony that Juan de la Cierva, who spent his life in seeking to make flying safe should lose it in one of the worst air disasters England has known, comments the Daily Sketch. Although Cierva was only 41, he had more than a quarter of a century's experience of aviation, for he began experimenting at the age of 15. He built the first aeroplane ever made in Spain. He told once how he conceived the idea of the "windmill 'plane' or autogyro. "I noticed the seeds falling from a sycamore tree," he said, "and it occurred to me to wonder why they fluttered down instead of falling plop. Then I noticed that each seed had two wings that spin round and buoyed it up. "So I thought I'd see if spinning wings would keep a 'plane in the air." Cierva had persistence as well as imagination or he would never have succeeded. He made 32 different autogyros before he even began to be satisfied. At first his father, a famous politician and formerly Spanish minister of war, helped him with funds. But the two men whose faith and backing finally established the autogyro as a commercial possibility were British—Lord Weir, the engineering magnate, and H. K. M. Kindersley, the banker.

Should Know Their Business

Farmers Advised To Take Inventory And Keep Books

With the beginning of a new year farmers are being urged by university extension departments to know their business better by taking inventory and keeping simple sets of books.

The University of Tennessee Extension Farm Management Department sets forth that an inventory has five good uses:

It shows net worth above all debts. It shows the financial progress made in the year.

It forms an excellent basis for preparing a credit statement to be used in getting bank credit.

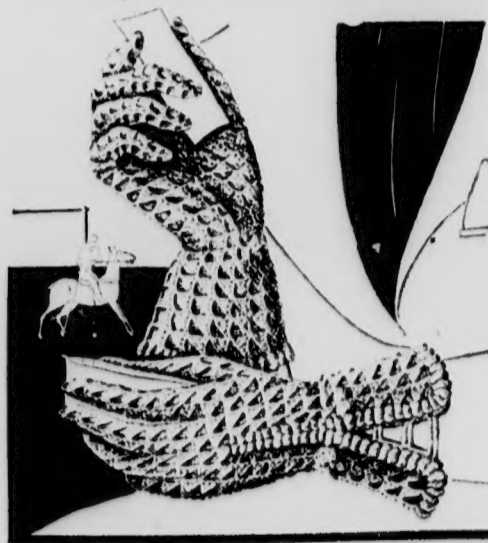

It is a valuable list of property for use in settling an estate or establishing insurance claims in case of fire or other destruction.

It brings to light needed repairs and replacements, shortages or surpluses of feed, seed and other supplies that should be bought or sold.

In many states university extension departments furnish forms for the inventory and bookkeeping and at the end of the year make an audit of the account.

At one time, Kansas had a prairie dog town five miles wide and 100 miles long.

Crocheted Lengthwise They Go Fast

PATTERN 5792

You'll want them for immediate wear—these smart gauntlets—and you can make them of string or yarn. They'll make your hands look their prettiest! A beginner can crochet them—they're that easy! They're done in lengthwise strips, using a simple stitch that's ever so effectively set off by a trim of popcorn stitch. These follow the new line of smart gloves-to-day. In pattern 5792 you will find detailed instructions for making the gloves shown in a small, medium and large size call in one pattern; material requirements, illustrations of the gloves and of all stitches used.

Federal government efforts to halt the rust scourge in western wheat fields by large-scale distribution of a rust-resistant wheat variety was announced by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture.

More than 6,000 bushels of the new variety, named Renown, will be distributed at $2 a bushel to farmers in rust-affected areas in the prairie provinces. Although each applicant is limited to two bushels of this test wheat, enough applications have been received already to exhaust the supply when distribution is made.

The new wheat will be distributed from the following points: Indian Head, Sask.; and Brandon, Portage la Prairie, Arborg, Dugald, Gilbert Plains, Guntton, Katrimie, Petersfield, Plumas, Roblin, Silvertown, Swan River and Pipestone in Manitoba.

"It should be understood the seed under consideration does not possess any special standing other than that of belonging to a new variety capable of resisting rust," said Dr. L. H. Newman, Dominion cerealist.

"We want the farmers to give it a fair trial and report next autumn giving their observations as to how it compares with other varieties grown near by."

Dr. Needham said the Renown variety was produced by Dr. C. H. Goulden at the Dominion rust resistant laboratory, Winnipeg.

He said three varieties of rust resistant wheat are now produced, Renown, Apex and Thatcher. The Dominion department of agriculture is concerned officially only with the distribution of Renown.

Apex is a variety developed at the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, from a composite crossing program involving the varieties, Marquis, Kanred and fumillo. Thatcher variety was produced from a cross made at the Minnesota agricultural experimental station, St. Paul, Minn. It was grown on many farms throughout Manitoba and Saskatchewan in 1936. Apex is being distributed by the University of Saskatchewan.

Too Young For Promotion

Two-Year-Old Boy Finishes First Grade With Honors

A little discouraged because he was not promoted to second grade this year, three-year-old Joey Ford brushed up his scholastics and prepared to confound Columbia University's learned doctors.

Joey, who at the age of two showed a great capacity for learning and carrots, sailed through first grade in Los Angeles professional school with ease and charged back this year to tackle addition, subtraction and the multiple difficulties of the second grade.

But there he ran into grief. Because of his extreme youth, teachers thought it best not to promote him despite his first grade honors.

That's why Joey was in New York to get a special intelligence test at Columbia. Doctors think he's about four years ahead of himself. When reporters visited him, Joey read a hilarious tale of a rabbit, detailing the difficulties of a bunny who was caught stealing jam.

"You see," he told them, "the naughty bunny was in a jam!"

Riddles Of Long Ago

Trace Back Brain Twisters To 400 B.C.

One riddle a champion riddle-collector couldn't unravel recently was: How old is the oldest riddle? This poser, admitted Dr. Archer Taylor, had him stumped. Dr. Taylor, chairman of the department of Germanic languages and literature at the University of Chicago, said he found evidence of "the Sphinx" riddle as far back as 400 B.C. in writings of Euripides. But even more ancient the professor felt, was a riddle based on numbers, and which had been traced back definitely 1,500 years.

A cat's whiskers, normally, are just the width of its body.

Paris, France, did not adopt a standard hour until 1816.

J. E. Gooder - Editor & Manager

The World of Wheat.

By H. G. L. STRANGE
Director "Crop Testing Plan."

A most unusual situation exists at the moment with the price of wheat on world markets.

No. 1 Northern Canadian wheat at Liverpool is selling for 14 cents a bushel more than the best Australian, 21 cents higher than the best Indian and 25 cents more than the best Argentine.

These spreads are considerably greater than the extra quality of "Manitobas" usually warrants, yet today, at these wide spreads, such quantities weekly are being purchased as will bring the "carry-over" of Canadian wheat on August 1 next down to a normal level of not more than 40 million bushels.

Why is it that suddenly the world is purchasing so much Canadian wheat at such unusual premiums?

Two explanations are made. One is that some countries in Europe, particularly Italy and Germany, are this year very short of food for their people and so are willing to pay these prices. The other thought is that a good deal of Canadian wheat now being purchased is not for immediate consumption, but rather for storing up against possible war. Canadian wheat is particularly well suited for this because it has good keeping qualities.

Sooner or later, however, these wide price spreads will narrow up.

Following factors have tended to raise the price: Italy and Germany continue to purchase wheat from many countries in large quantities -- Spain bidding for wheat -- Argentine large shipments being eagerly bought -- Wheat area in North China needs additional moisture -- Prices of many raw materials rising -- Mexican vegetable crops damaged by frost.

Following factors have tended to lower price: European crop conditions generally favorable -- India expects to start shipping to world markets soon -- Argentine and Australian crops of high quality -- U.S.A. winter wheat belt receives precipitation -- Germany admits admixture of potatoe and rye flour in bread -- Russia has record average in grains.

Accident Leads to Major Industry

A cow kicking over a lamp, they say, started the Chicago fire. A spider climbing a thread brought Bruce of Scotland victory. But these and many other historical incidents pale before the story of the housewife whose carelessness founded one important phase of the Canadian fish industry.

Away back in a Scottish village a housewife left a haddock hanging from the rafters of her cottage as she went out for the day. She had left it too near the peat fire, however, and when she returned, the fish was all dried by the smoke from the fire. She decided to cook it anyway and the result was so appetizing that the news spread like wildfire and smoked fish became a national delicacy.

Today the popularity of smoked fish has spread everywhere and the appetite for this delicacy has founded

Canadian organizations of international repute, some of which have been established for a century and more.

The Canadian climate has been found ideal for the production of this delicacy and other cured fish and today the Dominion holds a foremost place in the world trade in the export of dried, smoked and pickled fish.

Coronation Programme A Priceless Aid To Broadcast Listeners

Details Procession Step By Step And Service In Westminster Abbey
Word By Word

Recent events in England have necessitated costly changes in the Official Souvenir Programme of the Coronation. Many new plates have had to be made, and portions of the text have had to be re-written and re-set.

Produced in the form of a brochure, the programme will be a masterpiece of the printer's art, in every way befitting the grandeur of the historic occasion it is designed to commemorate. It consists of thirty-two pages of text and illustration, with a cover bearing the Royal Coat of Arms, printed in full colours and gold.

According to a bulletin just received by this paper from St. James's Palace, London, the contents will include special photographs of Their Majesties King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth; photographs of Her Majesty Queen Mary, Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Elizabeth, the Princess Margaret, and other members of the royal family; a coronation ode by John Masefield, poet laureate; the King's Majesty, the significance of the coronation to the Empire, by John Drinkwater; description of the coronation procession; a pictorial map of the route of the procession; the coronation service in Westminster Abbey; an explanation of the coronation ceremonial, with illustrations by Sir Gerald Wollaston, Garter principal king of arms; a genealogical table showing the descent of the crown.

With the aid of this programme, those listening to the coronation broadcast from London will be able to follow the historic ceremony word for word, and with complete understanding of what is taking place in the heart-centre of the Empire at each and every moment.

Those wishing to secure a copy are strongly advised to order same through their bookseller or news agent without delay. The price is 50 cents, and delivery may be taken on April 23rd, when the programme goes on sale. Orders so placed now will definitely be filled, but once the presses start no further orders can be accepted beyond the few that can be taken care of out of a very conservative over-run.

Many public and private institutions, societies, clubs and hospitals have already ordered large supplies, and one West African colony will distribute copies in its public schools. Last reports from England are that more than half a million copies have already been sold.

By gracious permission of His Majesty, the programme is being issued by King George's Jubilee Trust. All profits from its sale will be donated to bettering the lot of the under-privileged youth of Great Britain.

North Carolina used approximately 3,500 bales of cotton in experimental highway construction during the summer of 1936.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

A group of Belgian industrialists plan to visit Canada in May in an effort to increase trade between the two countries.

A King George V. gold crown piece, one of only 25 issued in connection with the silver jubilee of that monarch, has been sold for £200 ($1,000).

The University of Saskatchewan is sold out of Apex, the new rust-resistant wheat, Prof. Manley Champlin reports. Since Jan. 18, when the wheat first was offered to farmers, 70,000 pounds have been sold.

"Japan's Feet of Clay," a book in which Miss Freda Utley, correspondent of the Manchester Guardian discusses Japanese industries and general economics, has been banned from Japan.

A $6,000,000 relief works program for Winnipeg had the approval of the city council upon the recommendation of the civic relief works committee. It includes erection of a new $1,500,000 city hall.

Finding that delinquent or under-privileged children from four to 16 years old react favorably to musical instruction, one New York borough is giving music lessons to such children.

Mrs. Jessie McBeth Goodfellow, 70, first white child born in Prince Albert, died there recently. She was a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. John McKay, who helped establish the city in 1866.

The personal columns of The London Times carried the following notice: Wanted—Dangerous (legitimate) job for cultured sportsman, 33 years old; five languages; six years interior Africa, caravan expert."

Time Fully Occupied

Chairman Of B.B.C. Advisory Council Is Busy Man

Lord Macmillan, who succeeds the Archbishop of York as chairman of the B.B.C. Advisory Council, is one of the busiest of men. The number and variety of the commissions and inquiries over which he has presided in the past 12 years, in addition to his legal work, is astonishing. These are the subjects with which they dealt: Lunacy, miners' wages, the British Pharmacopoeia, street offences, finance and industry, income tax, the wool industry, shipbuilding, Canadian banking, and disputes between Holland and Norway. Somehow, he finds time, too, to work for the Pilgrim Trust, the Carnegie Trust, a hospital, the National Library of Scotland, a Scottish legal society, and King George's Jubilee Trust, recounts the News of the World. Such a list makes it easier to believe a story told of his days as a judge. To a long-winded counsel he is said to have sent this note: "Patience Stakes: 1, Macmillan; Also ran. Job." Counsel took the hint.

Conducts Orchestra In Palestine

Toscanini's Organization Composed Of Jewish Refugees From Germany

Arturo Toscanini, who will be long remembered by New York audiences for his musical genius and by all for his courageous anti-Fascist stand, has found a new field for usefulness in Palestine, where he has been conducting an orchestra composed of Jewish refugees from Germany, a musical organization which he has hailed as one of the world's finest. Palestine showed its appreciation recently by presenting Signor Toscanini with an orange grove which is expected to bear fruit next year and which bears his name. Toscanini, in giving thanks, announced that his refugee orchestra might go to Paris next summer to demonstrate its distinctiveness to the world.

Dolls For Princess

Two Miniature Dolls Received By Princess Elizabeth

Princess Elizabeth is not usually permitted to accept presents from strangers. But an exception was recently allowed for Eileen Martin and her young sister, Betty, of Weymouth, who sent the princess two miniature dolls.

The girls have received a letter from the queen telling of her majesty's decision.

The dolls are so small they were sent in a matchbox. Eileen explained she had seen pictures of the princess's dolls and they were all large so she tried to complete the household with smaller ones. They were hand-made.

T.B. Killing Off Eskimos

The Adoption Of White Man's Clothing Said To Be Largely Responsible

Tuberculosis is killing off Eskimos and Indians in Alaska 10 times as fast as it kills whites in the United States. And why?

"They have taken to silk stockings, calico dresses and white man's clothes instead of warm fur," says Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), chairman of the United States Indian affairs committee.

"They lack the white's immunity to white man's diseases, and are woefully poor and oftentimes ignorant," observed Dr. James G. Townsend, director of the health division of the office of Indian affairs, one-time resident of Alaska.

"Miners' flapjacks and sowbelly instead of native fish and seal blubber," was the comment of an Alaska bureau official who declined to let his name be used.

The death rate, described by these three men as appalling, was disclosed in a study by Dr. F. S. Fellows, past assistant surgeon-general of the United States public health service and director of the Alaska medical service. Dr. Fellows reported the death rate among Alaskan Eskimos and Indians as 655 per 100,000. It was about 57 per 100,000 in the United States.

Other officials expressed belief the senator had referred to silk stockings and calico dresses simply to epitomize the devastating effect upon the native races of the invasion of the white man with his diseases.

Thomas said the Eskimo and Indian women in particular had taken to American style dress in large numbers regardless of low average temperatures in Alaska, and as a result had lowered their resistance to tuberculosis—by far the most deadly disease among them.

French Air Force

Has Been Increased 37 Per Cent. Since Last June

The French air force has been increased 37 per cent. to approximately 4,000 machines since last June 1, the air minister, Pierre Cot, told the chamber of deputies. He implied France's air force was strong enough to meet any air threat by Germany, picturing it second only to Soviet Russia's.

His address followed upon a declaration by Communist Deputy Gittion that Germany's "motorized army of 1,100,000 men" could be hurled at the French frontier over new super-highways at the rate of 70,000 troops an hour.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Russia's Wheat Problem

To Plant 235,000,000 Acres Of Soviet Farm Land

Schedules for planting 235,000,000 acres of Soviet farm land this spring were published recently in Moscow.

About 88 per cent. of this area will be planted by the kolkhozes (collective farms); 11 per cent. by the sovkhoses (state farms); and less than one per cent. by individual peasants.

The schedule provides measures to guarantee the high quality of farm products. Semi-official sources declared the coming year should see unprecedented development of the speed-up movement and an increase in all harvests, especially grain.

An hour formerly was one-twelfth of the time between sunset and sunrise and one-twelfth of the time between sunrise and sunset; hence, it was of different lengths in different seasons.

SORE THROAT RELIEF

Famous 1-2-3 Method

At the first sign of sore throat due to a cold, dissolve three "Aspirin" tablets in $\frac{1}{2}$ glass of water. Gargle with this twice. It will act almost instantly to relieve the rawness and soreness of your throat. At the same time, take two "Aspirin" tablets with a full glass of water. This acts to combat fever, cold aches and pains and the cold itself. Repeat the treatment in 2 hours if necessary. This modern way to treat a cold is approved by thousands of doctors.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

He broke off abruptly. They had both become conscious of Michael's eyes following them. Michael's eyes held a gleam of jealousy as he viewed this intimate little scene between his wife and the man who once had been reported to be her lover.

They were back in the privacy of their own apartment, however, before Michael said a word. Then he burst out:

"I'm sorry we had to run into Marlowe tonight, Starr. I intended for you never to see him again."

Starr's face was strained. She had known subconsciously that it would be like this. All through their honeymoon in the country they had not mentioned Lance's name at all, as though by common consent. Michael had asked her nothing about the man. But she could not forget—Once, in that despairing mood, she had tacitly admitted to Michael that she had taken Lance Marlowe as her lover. That she had said it when she did for Michael's sake meant nothing now. If only she had not!

And now, because of Lance, after their long days of peace, they were in the midst of conflict again, tortured with memories which refused to be lived down.

It all was so plain to Starr. . . . Gossip linking her name with Lance's; her own voice crying out to Michael on that crazy night, telling him that she had been Lance's mistress, trying to make him hate her.

It was more than Starr could bear. She turned to her husband swiftly, pleadingly. Her voice raced.

"Michael, I've wanted to explain to you so many times, only somehow I couldn't. There has never been anything between Lance and me—never! I lied to you. All of that awful time I was living a lie! Michael, you do believe me, don't you? You must believe me!"

Michael, looking down on her said: "Of course I do," pressing her small, cold hands very tightly in his big ones. "You're my wife, and I love you."

But there was a strange edge to his voice which chilled her, in spite of his words.

CHAPTER XVII.

Busy days again. Except for that slight undercurrent of an imperfect understanding which Starr felt as if she were a divining rod for Michael's moods, happy days. So much to be done. And, as always at such times, little chance to think.

Michael threw himself into business with a will, making up for lost time. He left it to Starr to hunt out their new home. She had about come to the determination that they should not live in an apartment house at all, but should take one of those attractive houses out in Forest Hills. So much more like a home, with an upstairs and down, your own lawn, and a lovely wistaria vine that would be a purple cloud in the summer time.

Michael made a little objection. It was so far away from business, he said. But with a wifely concern for his health, Starr insisted that the drive into town each morning would be just the thing he needed. Perhaps he would not get any fresh air otherwise.

So it went, with most of their discussions at breakfast, at the luncheons downtown which Starr sometimes took with her husband, and during the placid evenings they spent together in the Egyptian living room with the Del-el-Bahari fresco. Life was perfect again—almost.

Then cataclysm. It was on a December morning not far from Christmas time when Starr received the first of the threatening letters.

She was seated across the breakfast table from Michael in the little alcove overlooking the shining East River when Sapphira came in with the morning mail. She handed it all to Michael, who ran his eye through the letters and handed over an envelope addressed to Starr. It was addressed in a rough, unformed hand. Not to Mrs. Michael Fairbourne, but simply to Starr Ellison.

Michael laughed queerly as he glanced up at her, handing her the letter.

"I thought everybody knew that we were married. Better advise your friends, Starr."

That was ridiculous. Actually she had not a friend in the world, now that she had cut herself loose from those who had known her in the New England town, who probably had not the faintest idea she was still in the land of the living. No friends—only acquaintances. Like Lance, and Stephanie, Tod Ranger, and perhaps Marjorie Browning, and the rest of that fast-stepping crowd. Certainly they could not be called friends.

With a curious pang of fear that caught her breath in her throat, she slit the envelope. A half strangled cry was forced back from her lips as the words stared at her. Then nameless dread plunged through her like a cold dagger.

On a single sheet of paper was written in that same unformed hand:

"You cannot escape your fate. You and the man you love."

There was no signature, only a queer scrawl near the bottom of the page that may or may not have been hebraic writing. Starr did not know.

She was in a daze. Then she became aware that Michael was saying sharply:

"What is it? What's the matter, Starr? Don't look like that!"

Somehow she pulled herself together, tried to smile with unconcern.

"It's nothing," she said, with too elaborate carelessness. "Nothing at all." But her lips shook, and her face was as white as the paper she held in her hand.

Michael's eyes seemed to be peering down into her very soul. He said sternly:

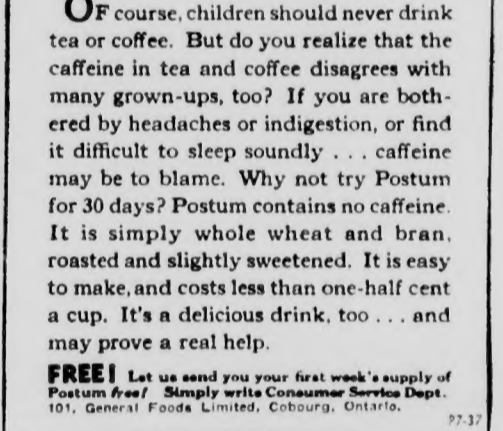

"Nonsense! There is something the matter. You look positively sick, Starr."

The note was crumpled in her nerveless fingers. She stared at him in a stricken silence. Michael held out his hand. Masterful again.

"Star, let me see that letter."

Her numbed lips moved, and in her dark eyes was tragedy. She shook her head.

DICK GETS A NEW PARTNER

OF course, children should never drink tea or coffee. But do you realize that the caffeine in tea and coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too? If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . caffeine may be to blame. Why not try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffeine. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too . . . and may prove a real help.

"I can't, Michael. It isn't anything. I told you so."

The familiar line on Michael's jaw stood out. He spoke steadily.

"There should be no secrets between husband and wife. Let me see that letter!"

It had become a matter of vital importance now. Michael was demanding a husband's rights, and Starr knew she must refuse him. She would refuse him, no matter what happened. And he was probably thinking . . .

Suspicion clouded Michael's face. Suspicion edged his voice.

Starr did not dare imagine what he was thinking. But she was thinking—remembering. . . . That whispered conversation with Lance, and now came a mysterious letter which she would not explain. Did he think that she and Lance was communicating clandestinely, and only the chance of this letter having arrived at an inopportune time had betrayed the secret?

Dully Starr repeated, as she shook her head: "I can't!"

Michael did not ask her again. He simply got up from the table, leaving his breakfast half finished. He stalked out into the entry way and yanked his hat and coat from the hook. Starr heard the outer door bang behind him. It was the first time since their marriage that he had gone out of the apartment without kissing her goodbye.

The distraught bride paced her long living room in a mental torment. She paid no attention to Sapphira's perplexed comments, as if she had not heard her.

What was the meaning of this ominous note? Where had it come from? Who knew? It was like a direct answer to the fear which had been growing upon her slowly since the day her honeymoon ended.

In spite of her busy days, she had had long hours in which to brood, hours when she was alone. Michael, fired with the enthusiasm of providing for their future, had been working under double pressure. She had been thinking about the future, too, defying her inexorable fate, planning, working for a home in which she and Michael should spend long years together. She might have known the futility of that!

Weeks had sped by rapidly. With a dazed feeling Starr now suddenly realized that it was many weeks—weeks that had flown into months—since the doctor had told her: "You won't live another six months."

Suppose his prophecy came true? Suppose the curse did fall upon her, as all along she had felt in the depths of her soul that it would? She had defied her destiny. Love—married. Was it to end now—her forbidden happiness?

Yacht Will Cost Million

Challenger For America's Cup Is Building Luxurious Craft

The most luxurious yacht believed ever to have been built for a private owner will soon be launched for T. O. M. Sopwith, aircraft millionaire and challenger for the America's cup. It is his 10th yacht in 10 years and will cost him $1,000,000, bringing his total outlay for yachts to $5,000,000.

Guests will fare well, with accommodation for 50, and such extra equipment as a tile-lined swimming pool, a gymnasium, a hospital, a ballroom and a cocktail bar. Some cabins will be decorated in modern style, some in period. There will be golf practice nets and sliding panels of sun ray glass on the promenade deck.

Must Be Competition

Government Order Regulates The Sale Of Militia Horses

The government will tolerate no combinations in restraint of trade, nor secret covenants made to restrict free competition—even in the sale of militia horses. From time to time the noble steeds are found unfit for further service, or, for other reasons, have to be sold. In any case, the national defence department will see that fair's fair.

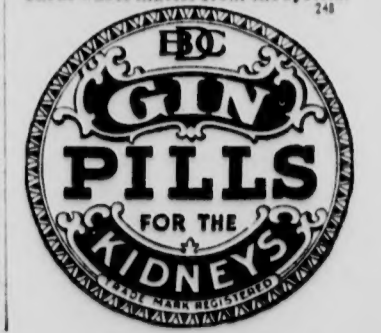

General order No. 2, tabled in the House of Commons by Ian Mackenzie, minister of national defence, makes this clear. It set forth that when one of these chargers has to be sold the sale has to be done by auction, and the C.O. of the regiment promoting the sale "will detail an officer to attend."

The reason is clear. The G.O. 2 continues that it will be the duty of this officer "to see that no combination exists to keep down the price. If such combination is apparent he will, after consultation with the auctioneer, postpone the sale."

The auctioneer gets a $5 fee if the sale price is $100, and five per cent, if over. However, there might not be much in it for the auctioneer because, says the order, he "will pay for all the advertising."

About the Neighbours

Somebody once said it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Most of us agree they are all here. You may like all your neighbours and you may not. The point is, if not, WHY not?

Would you remain friendly with the man who told you one thing one day and the opposite the next? Would you prefer a neighbour who always lived up to his promises, to one who promised one thing one day and did something entirely different the next?

Would you lend your closest neighbour your binder or wagon if you had no reason to suppose he would ever return it? Or would you lend him your cold chisel if you knew he would tell all his friends you were the most unreasonable and most greedy person alive?

Do you think for a minute your community would be made more harmonious, a better place in which to live if everybody did the best they could, were as fair in their dealings with each other as you would have your neighbour be with you?

Is it not a marvelous feeling to know you can trust your neighbour? Is there any excuse your neighbour can possibly make that would pardon him in your own mind for suddenly disregarding all agreements or promises he ever made to you?

This statement is one of a series written by The Mortgage Loans Association of the Province of Alberta. The Association is composed of 34 member companies. It represents hundreds of thousands of small investments by typical Canadians. Its loans to citizens of Alberta amount to some forty-five million dollars.
